Some sharp art coming to Poulsbo's waterfront

Written by Rachel Seymour/Kitsap Sun

A plan to embed three glass swords into a rock along Poulsbo's waterfront means more Norwegian culture and history is coming to Kitsap's "Little Norway." The Historic Downtown Poulsbo Association and members of the town's art district started discussion on commissioning artwork for the Muriel Iverson Williams Waterfront Park, and decided the piece should be specific to Norwegian culture . . . Restaurant supplier to open retail shop

Written by Tad Sooter/Kitsap Sun

If your business is toilet paper, you will always have customers. It's a tongue-in-cheek business mantra, but one that's served entrepreneur Aaron Stanford well. The North Kitsap High School graduate has built a successful enterprise around selling restaurant, cleaning and automotive supplies that are essential, if not glamorous . . . In January, Cass/Cade will open its first retail outlet warehouse off Highway 3 north of Poulsbo. . . continue reading

Mapping the History of American Craft Beer

Written by Kendall Jones/Seattle PI via Washington Beer Blog

A recently released report from the Journal of Wine Economics shows exactly how craft beer spread across the nation over the past 35 years. That is, some big-brained economists sat down and figured out what craft beer historians already know. Still, it's interesting to read. . . continue reading

A ride 'round the 'P'bo Loop'

Written Peter O'Cain/North Kitsap Herald

If you've ever wondered what it's like to ride a bus around Poulsbo, now's your chance to do so without leaving your screen. The RockFish Group created a promotional video to promote Kitsap Transit's Route 44—the newest, fastest and most popular bus route in Poulsbo . . . continue reading and watch video

Funding approved for Naval Base Kitsap projects

Written by Kitsap Sun via The Associated Press

More than $90 million has been approved for multiple improvement projects at Naval Base Kitsap. The Kitsap Sun reports that the funding is part of more than $1 trillion approved by Congress Friday in the military construction budget. . . continue reading
