Poulsbo brewery making Mortal Kombat beer

Written by Tad Sooter/Kitsap Peninsula Business Journal

Anyone excited by the phrase “FINISH HIM!” might be intrigued by a line of beers being produced by Poulsbo’s Sound Brewery. The fast-growing Viking Avenue brewery recently announced a series of beers inspired by the Mortal Kombat video game and movie franchise, in partnership with distribution company Global Beverage Traders, which obtained the license from game publisher Warner Bros. . . ## Subscription-based model for primary care gives patients more access, doctors more time

Written by Terri Gleich/Kitsap Peninsula Business Journal

Walking into Pacifica Medicine & Wellness is more like entering a spa than a doctor’s office. There’s a spicy floral scent, calming music, fruit-infused water and a soothing décor of natural wood and seascapes. Further evidence that Marie Matty and Andrea Chymiy are doing something different: The doctors greet their patients. . . continue reading

Friendship helped give birth to Poulsbo Twilight Criterium

Written by John Becerra Jr./Kitsap Sun

There’s a really funny story about how Brad Haley and Amy Larson met, and it involves the type of racing done on four wheels instead of two . . . Several years later, Haley is doing what he can to help Larson, who is dealing with cancer, by making her a beneficiary of the proceeds from Saturday’s first ever Poulsbo Twilight Criterium. The end result—actually holding the race—has been the culmination of a year and a half of hard work done by Haley a Poulsbo. . . continue reading

Summer fire preparation North Kitsap Fire & Rescue

Michele Laboda/Kitsap Sun

As of this writing, there are already several large wildland fires underway on the west (“wet”) side of the Cascades and it seems like the fire season is starting early. We know that wildland fires can happen here; it’s in your interest as well as ours to prepare yourself, your family, your home and your property as much as possible. We’re partnering with our neighbors at the Poulsbo Fire Department and others to host several meetings in June on wildland fire safety . . . continue reading
