Hey, Seattle: The grass is greener across the sound

Written by Tad Sooter/Kitsap Sun

Come to Kitsap, you stressed-out Seattleites. Cross Puget Sound and you can save money on housing and spend less of your life trapped in traffic. You might even use that mountain bike that's collecting cobwebs in your closet. Bring your company with you...and your employees, too. They'll love it here. Trust us. It's a straightforward pitch, and one that. . . continue reading

More trails planned at Poulsbo's Fish Park

Written by Rachel Anne Seymour/Kitsap Sun

Poulsbo's Fish Park has grown by about 15 acres in the last five years, and as the park boundary expands, trails are growing with it. The city is proposing new trails to connect the northern park expansion, said Mary McCluskey, Poulsbo's park director. The latest plans for Fish Park will double the miles of trails available from 1.5 to about 3. The trail expansion will have to take place in phases as funding becomes available through grants . . . ## Encourage employees to get flu shots early

Written by Kitsap Sun

Forty-five percent of workers who get sick with the flu believe they caught it from someone at work, according to the medical journal Clinical Infectious Diseases. It's a timely reminder that influenza season will soon be upon us and that it's not too early to urge employees to get flu shots. It's an easy way for employees to protect themselves and . . . ## Nature chases trolls from Poulsbo bridge mural

Written by Rachel Anne Seymour/Kitsap Sun

Poulsbo's Lindvig Bridge mural is taking a visionary turn from supernatural to all natural. The bridge trolls have moved away and nature is taking over, although it wasn't Norseman the Viking that ran off his sinister neighbors. After some reflection, artist James Mayo felt a depiction of a natural environment would be better suited for a mural next to Fish Park, a nature park. . . continue reading

AmericanWest Bank branch is now a Banner Bank branch

Written by Michale Moore/Kitsap Sun

The AmericanWest Bank branch at 18690 Highway 305 is now a Banner Bank branch, the result of an acquisition announced Nov. 5, 2014. "While the signs on our building [have changed], the people inside are the same you've come to know and trust," Banner announced. . . continue reading
