Sound Works Job Center helps connect people, careers

Written by Richard Walker/North Kitsap Herald

It's been a little agency that roars. Since it started keeping records in 1995, Sound Works Job Center has had more than 42,000 client visits for help with resumes, cover letters, or job searches. It's connected its clients with 6,000 - 7,000 full-and part-time jobs. And those clients returned more than $20 million, in terms of wages earned and spent, to local communities . . . Could this really be another newborn orca in Puget Sound?

Written by Christopher Dunagan/Kitsap Sun

Break out the champagne! Amazingly, another new baby has been born to the Southern Resident killer whales that frequent the Puget Sound. This makes eight newborns arriving since December of last year. In the 40 years that the Center for Whale Research has maintained . . . continue reading

'Shop With a Cop' brings early Christmas

Written by Kitsap Peninsula Business Journal

About 110 police officers lined the front of Walmart Dec. 5 awaiting a motorcade. They weren't greeting politicians or dignitaries or celebrities. They were waiting for two busloads of kids to arrive so they could take them shopping. . . . continue reading

Poulsbo budget approved with tax cuts

Written by Rachel Seymour/Kitsap Sun

The Poulsbo City Council on Wednesday approved the 2016 budget, which includes utility tax cuts. Residents will be paying lower taxes on sewer and water next year, after the city approved decreasing those utility taxes to 9 percent from 12 percent . . . continue reading

Coffee Oasis 'actually saved my life'

Written Peter O'Cain/North Kitsap Herald

Annalees Hern doesn't know where she'd be if she hadn't found The Coffee Oasis in Poulsbo about four years ago. She was homeless and facing time in jail. "This place actually saved my life," Hern said. ". . . I would not be here without this place." Hern, 20, needed help in several. . . continue reading
