RV dealer plans Poulsbo business

Written by Tad Sooter/Kitsap Sun

Recreational vehicles are making a comeback on Poulsbo's Viking Avenue. An RV dealer will open on the old auto corridor in June, though not the dealer most Poulsbo residents are familiar with. This time it's Sumner RV, a Pierce County business, setting up shop on Viking. Sumner RV has signed a two-year lease on the former mobile home dealership . . . continue reading

Changes for Poulsbo Marine Science Center

Written by Terry Asla/North Kitsap Herald

When the city hands over the keys to the Poulsbo Marine Science Center to Western Washington University on May 24, there may not be a signed contract. . . While details may change, the broad strokes of the agreement are clear: Ownership of the building and property, and the Marine Science Center Foundation's assets, will be turned over to WWU. For the city, this means the land, the building and its contents . . . continue reading

Poulsbo proposal includes affordable housing

Written by Tad Sooter/Kitsap Sun

A former mobile home dealership in Poulsbo could be transformed into a residential neighborhood if a joint venture between Housing Kitsap and a private developer come to fruition. The nonprofit housing agency and development firm Sound West Group announced plans this week to build a mixed affordable and market-rate housing development . . . continue reading

NK grad produces movie with veterans, for veterans

Rachel Seymour/Kitsap Sun

One Kitsap native and military veteran was tired of how veterans were depicted in Hollywood films and decided to take matters into his own hands with the help of other veterans. Jarred "JT" Taylor, a 2003 graduate of North Kitsap High School who grew up in the Island Lake area, teamed up with his veteran friends to fundraise more than $1.1 million for the film "Range 15," . . . ## Poulsbo Fish Park mural completed

Written by Terry Asla/North Kitsap Herald

Artist James Mayo has finished the mural under the Lindvig Way bridge over Dogfish Creek. "You commissioned me to do you a 'Big Mac and fries,'" Mayo told the Poulsbo City Council on May 4, in reference to the council's initial request for the painting of a troll. "And I've given you a steak and fine wine." . . . continue reading
